

KNOWLEDGE TRANSFER PARTNERSHIP

The British Society of Animal Science (BSAS) Early Career Council is the voice of the UK and Ireland's most talented upcoming animal scientists.

The Early Career Council, consisting of postgraduate and early career researchers, is seeking interest from young farmers organisations interested in developing a knowledge transfer partnership.

The ultimate aim of the partnership will be to provide farmer organisations access to the most up to date scientific information associated with a specific topic, whilst providing our early career animal scientists with the opportunity to engage with industry.

So if you are developing a new policy position paper or have members of a discussion group simply interested in a particular topic, why not contact the BSAS Early Career Council to see if one of our members can help provide your organisation with the most up to date data available.

Further information on BSAS Early Careers Council, including information on Council Members, can be found here.
